We live in the era of globalisation. Different countries provide different resources and products to the world. This process unites people and countries that they live in, it makes the world work as a whole.

The way world works right now lets us try the vast majority of national food, that is being made in other countries. It leads to a freedom of ^{choice} in terms of food we eat. It lets people try new things and it increases their fulfillment in life.

Almost every country has its own natural resources. The amount of resources depends on country's geography. Some countries have less valuable resources than their neighbours do. Sharing natural resources is a great solution to this problem.

Cultures differ from place to place and sharing country's traditions helps in understanding world's history better. Untold truths are being uncovered because countries started sharing their cultural identity.

Different countries have different things that they can give to the world. Globalisation provides each country with important products and valuable resources. Because of the globalisation many people started living better lives. This process helps countries that are in need and lets developed countries optimise their internal processes.
